Subject: J4U Program Updates

Dear Supplier Partner,

We would like to share some updates regarding the J4U program.

South America

We have been closely monitoring the changes in the automotive market and have made the business decision to discontinue the project formerly known as J4U in South America.

We are pleased to confirm a new next generation of the Jeep Compass in South America. Additional time is needed to redesign the project and implement necessary technical adjustments. This new generation will be developed on an updated Small Wide platform, designed for multi-energy products, ensuring the same level of innovation and efficiency. An updated timeline will be communicated in the near future.

Since your company has been nominated for the J4U South America project, our team will contact you to discuss your situation and evaluate the impacts and opportunities collaboratively.

North America

As previously communicated, Stellantis is reassessing its product strategy in North America to ensure we are offering customers a range of vehicles with flexible powertrain options that best meet their needs.

Consequently, the company has temporarily paused work on the next-generation Jeep Compass (J4U) North America project.

Europe

The global launch and media reveal of the next-generation Jeep Compass J4U project has already taken place in Europe. That vehicle, produced in Melfi, Italy, is set to launch in the European region this year before expanding to other markets, including Asia. Stellantis requires your full support and proactive approach to ensure a successful 2025 Start of Production (SOP) in Europe. We are available for any further clarification.
